Quad-City purchased Compress Shield for one of their customers, a water heater manufacturing plant that was losing all of six compressors every year. Walt Steenrod prefaced his purchase of Compress Shield with, "These compressors are in a very harsh environment and if this additive will add three or four months to the life of the compressors it would be worth it." When they installed Compress Shield they reported that they already heard valve problems within one of the compressors and that it would probably have to be replaced in a couple of weeks. They installed Compress Shield in all six of the compressors in September 2000. The one that they anticipated changing within two weeks did not fail until July of 2001, an additional 10 months. The other five are still operating.
